Electric Motion Signs.

The junior member of a big electrical sign construction company was walking along Broadway with a friend after the theater. He nodded his head toward one of the blazing advertising displays in which a horse appears on the gallop.

"Has it ever occurred to you how detailed must be the work of the sign builder to represent the movements of living beings in bulbs and make them artistically realistic? We have to go far afield sometimes to obtain the life-like effect. That horse, for example, plants his hoofs just as in real life; otherwise that sign would be an animated cartoon. Now, to get the individual or disjointed movements of the legs in their order of sequence the builder minded that the eye of the camera is keener than man's, procured the motion picture film of a galloping horse and examining each snapshot, drew his plans in duplicate. Flashing his bulbs on and off with the same speed employed by a movie operator, the designer has produced the effect of smooth and continuous motion."—New York Sun.

Spoiled His Alibi.

A man can't be too careful in the selection of his alibis. Recently the head of a family returned home early in the morning. He had boasted to his wife that he would be home early and wanted her to know that he had kept his word, although he had not done so. Very quietly he turned the hands of his watch back, then turned the hands of the parlor clock and the clock in the dining room. Then he threw his shoes on the floor and awoke his wife. "Late again, I suppose," she remarked. "My watch says one minute to 12," he replied. She hopped out of bed and surveyed the dining room clock. Not believing her sleepy eyes, she turned to the timepiece in the parlor. "All right, but how did you do it?" she asked. He was about to give her an explanation, when the chiming of a nearby church sounded two. His alibi was shattered. An altogether different explanation was given, but he was too surprised to make it convincing.—New York Tribune.

Portland Cement.

The making of a barrel of portland cement will consume about 450 pounds of limestone and 150 pounds of clay or shale. A plant making 1,000 barrels a day will therefore use in the course of an ordinary year about 66,000 tons of limestone and 22,000 tons of clay or shale. Assuming average density for these materials, a 1,000,000 barrel plant will use up almost 1,000,000 cubic feet of limestone a year, together with 250,000 cubic feet of shale, the United States geological survey points out.

"As the investment in the plant is heavy it would be folly to locate a cement plant under ordinary circumstances at a point where less than twenty years' supply of raw materials is in sight," the government scientists suggest. A 1,000 barrel plant, therefore, should have 20,000,000 cubic feet of limestone and 5,000,000 cubic feet of clay or shale on its properties.

The Paper Mark Twain Liked.

An interesting anecdote about Edwin Litchfield Turnbull, an alumnus of Johns Hopkins university, is told in the News-Letter, the weekly student publication of his alma mater. Mr. Turnbull, when thirteen years old, published for the benefit of a local charitable organization an amateur journal called the Acorn. He ran the paper entirely, doing the writing, typesetting and subscription soliciting. Among his subscribers were the late Mark Twain, the humorist, and Sidney Lanier, the "Hopkins poet."

One day he received the following letter from Mark Twain:

Dear Sir—Yours is the kind of paper for me—one that comes but six times a year and can be read in five minutes. Please send it to me for ten years. Check enclosed. Yours truly, S. L. CLEMENS.

One of Boyle Roche's Gems.

In "The Lighter Side of Irish Life" there is an extract from a speech of Sir Boyle Roche, that famous maker of "bulls," when he was denouncing the French revolution in the Irish house of commons. This is one gem:

"There, Mr. Speaker, if these Gallican villains should invade us, sir, 'tis on that very table maybe these honorable members might see their own destinies lying in heaps on top of one another. Here perhaps, sir, the murderous marshal law men, Marseillais, would break in, cut us to mince and throw our bleeding heads upon that table, to stare us in the face!"

Cautious.

A departing husband charged his wife that she place upon his monument, "Prepare to follow me," but, remembering his dubious past and his uncertain future, added a line of her own:

To follow thee I am not content Until I know which way thou went.
